We started working with the building committee of the Anglican Church Light of Christ in the spring of 2014. When we first met them, they were working on the project of their new church for almost three years. They were at the third series of design revisions, and unfortunately, at a third round of offers. Needless to say they were frustrated, and still a million dollars out of budget. Immediately after we thoroughly examined the projects, we were able to propose value engineering solutions that could help bring the project back into the budget. Working with 3D rendering programs, we were able to show in person to the commission how architectural choices would impact the project. In addition, we could show how different design scenarios would impact the budget. Thanks to this approach, we were able to analyze the characteristics of buildings, evaluate individual options and explore substitution materials at each stage. Thanks to our process of meetings focused on the customer, focused on budget negotiations in real dollars and cents, we were able to develop a plan to build their church within the original goal, without compromising the initial vision of the project. The church includes a sanctuary of 180 places, narthece, parish hall, kitchen, library, choir room, classroom and ecclesiastical offices. Architectural details include custom-designed moldings, railings, large 2-storey windows and an impressive 80-foot bell tower. There is a problem with your email/password.
